

ABSTRACT

Dry coaxial cable resistant to water penetration, made of a core conductor, a dielectric element based on three layers of polymers, and an external conductor and an 5 extruded cover, characterized because it has swellable protecting elements against water penetration placed between the external conductor and the protective cover.